Increased deposits, greater reserves, expanded resources—these facts, as revealed at the annual meetings of the First National and the Farmers National banks yesterday afternoon, tell the story of a decided industrial and business expansion in the Salem district in the past year.

Both banks re-elected directors. At the First National they are Jacob Ambler, L. H. Brush, L. H. Colley, D. B. McCune, H. H. Sharp, W. H. Dunn, and R. F. Benzinger.

At the Farmers National—G. R. Deming, F. J. Emeny, W. L. Hart, N. C. Hunt, E. M. Jenkins, Dr. G. A. Roose and T. E. Miller. Miller was named during the year to succeed the late Homer Silver.

FLU CLOSES MORE
SCHOOLS IN OHIOCases Increase, says Health
Chief Though Not to Epidemic Status

(By Associated Press)
More Ohio schools were closed today as new cases of influenza were reported.

All schools in Hardin county were dismissed as measles and chicken-pox joined in keeping 633 pupils in 13 school districts absent.

Dr. Nelson C. Dysart, Columbus health commissioner, reported an increase in the number of cases of influenza in the capital, although he stated that the situation had not reached epidemic proportions.

In 17 parochial schools in Columbus with an enrollment of 5,905 students, 615 were reported absent. No figures were available on the public school absenteeism.

Others Suspended
Additional schools suspending classes included Southeastern school in Ross county, Manchester school in Adams county, and Kingman, Mt. Pleasant, and New Antioch in Clinton county.

Authorities of Plain City, northwest of Columbus, ordered public schools closed after a day reversed 135 of 360 pupils were absent because of influenza and colds.

University hospital at Columbus reported that 13 Ohio State university students suffering from influenza had been placed in an isolation ward. The hospital indicated additional cases, less severe, are under treatment privately in student rooming places.

At Hamilton a mother and daughter, patients in the same hospital room, died within an hour of pneumonia, as influenza caused closing of Hamilton schools.

The victims were Mrs. George Brown, 68, and Mrs. Darrell Wilkins, 34. Health Commissioner C. J. Baldrige reported 2,000 students absent among a total city enrollment of 9,000.

ICE GRIPS STATE
AS RAIN FREEZESDriving Is Made Hazardous,
But Accident Reports Are Few

A light coating of ice covered at least two-thirds of Ohio today as falling temperatures turned a general rainfall into sleet.

Temperatures ranged from 15 to 40 degrees.

Ice covered the streets and highways in Salem, Toledo, Columbus, Youngstown, Mt. Vernon, Lancaster, Zanesville, Cambridge, Coshocton, Dayton, Cincinnati, Springfield and Steubenville, the state highway department reported.

Traffic was slowed to a crawl as cinder crews worked on the most hazardous spots. Many minor accidents were reported in the state.

A light blanket of snow was reported at Toledo and Mt. Pleasant. It was raining in Wilmington, St. Clairsville and New Philadelphia.

Icy roads prevented the Cedarville college basketball team from reaching Wilmington for a game last night.

The rain and freeze occurred in this district after most folks had gone to bed. Consequently, the accident factor was low, the state highway patrol reported today.

The patrol was called on only one case, involving a collision of cars on the Depot rd.

A car driven by Homer J. Hoffee, 58, of R. D. 4, Lisbon, was enroute south. Another car, owned by Lester Vincent, also of R. D. 4, Lisbon, and driven by Hazel Vincent, 28, a school teacher, was enroute north.

Hoffee's car, the patrol reports, skidded into the path of the Vincent car. Miss Vincent, Harry Vincent and Florence Hoffee, 32, were treated at the Central Clinic hospital here for cuts and bruises.

Another school teacher, Clara Reeves, of Columbiana, figured in an accident near Lisbon. She was enroute to 10 school north of Wellsville when her car skidded on the Lisbon-Columbiana rd., and crashed into a bridge. The car was badly damaged but the teacher, uninjured, obtained other transportation and continued on to work.

GET FINGERPRINTS
IN MURDER CASE

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 15.—Major Leland Barnes of the state highway patrol said fingerprints of a suspect held in the killing of James Henslee, Lithia Springs, Ga., in McCreary county Jan. 9 were being sent to headquarters here.

Barnes said yesterday he did not have "any definite information" on the suspect's name or where he was being held. He added that a gun the suspect was carrying was being forwarded for ballistic tests.

Barnes said Henslee was shot three times near Greenwood, McCreary county, as he was returning to Georgia after delivering a load of fruit to an Ohio purchaser. An automobile which he had bought was said by Barnes to have been found and stored at Corbin by officers.

Fascists Retire In Haste, Leaving Dead, Wounded On Battlefield

LONDONERS ENJOY
QUIETNESS AGAINN. African Front Simmers; British Prepare For Tobruk Attack

(By Associated Press)
Greece's mountain fighters reported today they smashed two Italian counter-attacks in the drive north from Kilsura, in central Albania, compelling the Fascists to retire in such haste they left dead and wounded on the battlefield. Then, the Greeks said, they resumed their advance toward Berat.

"The first assault was easily repelled," a Greek government spokesman declared.

"The second attack turned out worse. The Italians suffered even heavier losses. They gave up and returned to their position in disorder."

Lull In Air Siege
Bad weather caused a lull in the air siege of Britain during the night, but RAF bombers flew "dirty" skies to pound Nazi air bases, shipping and a railway bridge in German-occupied Norway. Two direct hits were reported on a motorship in Stavanger roads, on the west coast.

London's millions enjoyed another night of quiet, wondering at the continued absence of German raiders since Sunday night.

With the arrival of daylight, however, Nazi bombers returned to the assault. A lone raider machine-gunned a village in northern Scotland and dropped a single bomb. Planes were also reported over East Anglia.

Reports reaching Struga, Yugoslavia, said Albanian guerrillas were raiding Fascist lines of communication and ammunition depots thus complicating the Italian efforts to stem the Greek advance.

Two Albanian battalions, organized by Italians, were said to have been disbanded because they refused to fight the Greeks.

There was little news from the north African front as the British

Scouts Will Honor
Memory of Founder

Salem Boy Scouts, leaders and troop committeemen will pay homage to the late Lord Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts of America, in a memorial service at 10:45 a. m. Sunday in the First Methodist church.

Rev. Carl Asmus, pastor of the church, will speak.

Lord Baden-Powell, a young English army officer some 60 years ago, trained soldiers on duty in Africa to look out for themselves. The lack of initiative in his troops at that time led him to undertake the training of youth when he returned to England some years later.

That marked the beginning of the Boy Scout movement which soon spread to America and other civilized countries of the world.

The annual banquet of the Columbiana county Boy Scout council will be held at Lisbon Jan. 27, while the annual covered dinner and meeting of local Scouts is scheduled for Feb. 11 at the Memorial building. It is announced by Commissioner Eddie Howell.

Dr. Francis S. Onderdonk To Appear Before Three Salem Groups

Dr. Francis S. Onderdonk, authority on world affairs, will lecture before three Salem groups Thursday.

He will appear in the morning at High school assembly, at noon before the Kiwanis club following luncheon, and at 8 p. m. at the Methodist church.

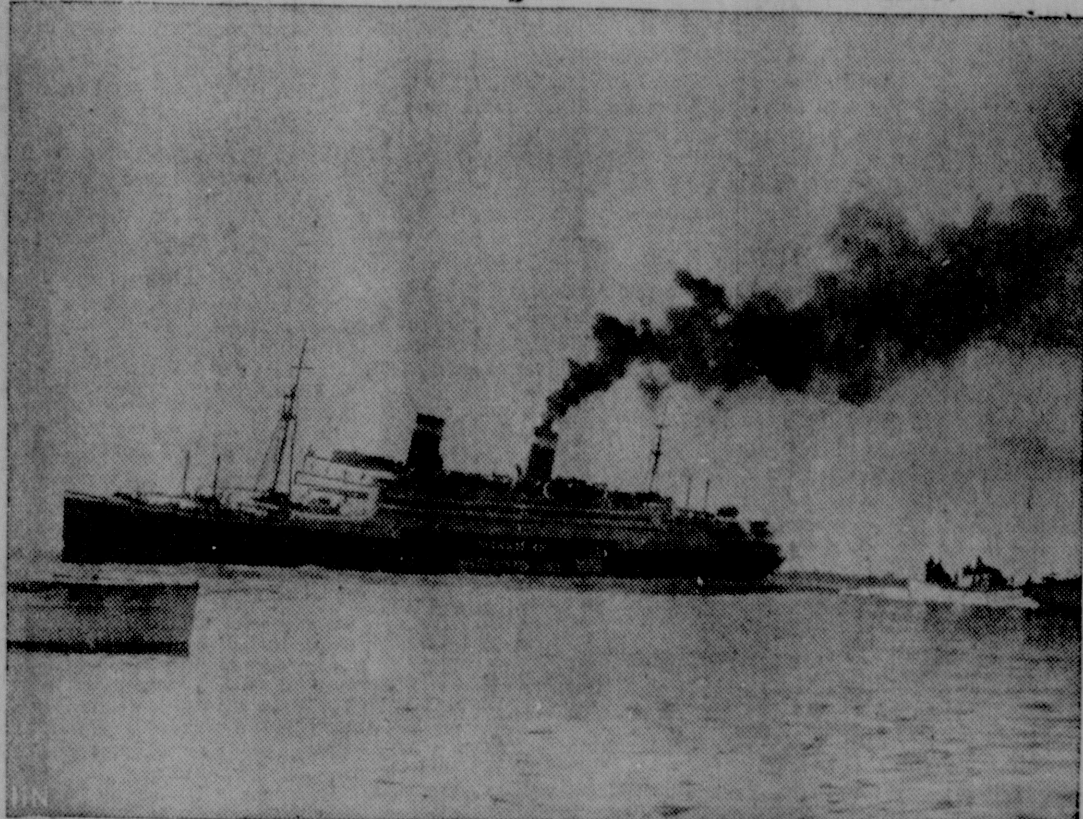

While his church appearance is sponsored by the Men's club, the meeting will be open to the public.

Dr. Onderdonk holds that as "the richest and most influential nation in the world, the United States has a sacred duty to support the remaining democracies and to help build a world community."

"The country," he says, "should at least change the neutrality law so that in the future we would furnish everything but an army to victim nations and deny all supplies and munitions to aggressor nations."

FIRE ON THE SPOT,
WRITER BELIEVESMacKenzie Sees Both British and Nazis With Eyes
On Ireland

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
When the European belligerents get to accusing each other of having the self-same scheme in mind, it's a fair guess that the thoughts of both of them do indeed run in the same channel.

I have a feeling that's the way the wind blows in the matter of the strategic naval bases of Eire (southern Ireland). England and Germany are charging each other with intending to invade neutral Ireland to occupy these ports—which would be worth their weight in rubies to either side—and personally I wouldn't bet a ha' penny that both aren't right.

It wouldn't be surprising to see the two of them, at any moment now, racing for southern Ireland to snatch these prizes. Each can use the customary explanation for such operations—that he was forced to act in order to head the other fellow off. The respective viewpoints of Britain and Nazidom are these:

Use of these bases is among England's most pressing needs to enable her to combat the grave dangers of the German submarine campaign against shipping.

Should Hitler occupy strategic points in Eire, he would acquire ideal naval and air bases to strengthen his attack on British vessels. These bases also would increase Nazi chances for a successful invasion of Britain, since she would have to defend herself against attacks from both east and west.

Small wonder then that uneasy Eire should be sitting in a mighty drafty spot, with no better place to go. However, Prime Minister Eamon De Valera has squared his chin against desertion of neutrality and Eire has sworn to fight if any one of the belligerents sets foot upon a shamrock.

Having known Mr. De Valera for many years, I can testify that he is a fighter. His point in refusing to abandon neutrality and allow Britain to use the bases in question, is that if he does so he immediately turns Eire into a battlefield for the Nazis and Allies. London challenges the wisdom of this argument, though there can be no doubt of its truth.

Secretary of State Says
Control of Oceans

Appears As Witness Before
House Foreign Affairs Committee

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Secretary Hull told the house foreign affairs committee today that "control of the high seas by law abiding nations is the key to the security of the western hemisphere."

The state department chief appeared before the committee as the first witness on President Roosevelt's bill for aiding Britain and other nations "fighting aggression" by lending or leasing them war materials ranging from bullets to battleships.

Could Allocate Resources
Hull described the measure as one which would "make it possible for us to allocate our resources in ways best calculated to provide for the security of this nation and of this continent."

Above all, he declared, "it will do all of these things in the speediest possible manner, and, overwhelmingly, speed is our greatest need today."

In a comprehensive review of the international situation, Hull declared that three nations—Germany, Japan and Italy—had made

"The question," said Secretary Hull before the foreign affairs committee today, is whether in the face of a universally recognized movement or force to invade and conquer, peaceful nations shall wait until the invader crosses their boundary lines, or whether they shall recognize that this is a world movement of conquest and invoke the law of self defense before it is too late.

"That is the question," Hull declared emphatically. "We can take our choice."

abundantly clear "their determination to repudiate and destroy the very foundations of a civilized world order under law and to enter upon the road of armed conquest, of subjugation, of other nations, and of tyrannical rule over their victims."

Dangers Are Cited
In describing the importance of control of the high seas, the secretary declared that "should that control be gained by the partners of the tripartite pact (Germany, Italy and Japan) the danger to our country, great as it is today, would be multiplied many fold."

"Were Britain defeated and were she to lose command of the seas, Germany could easily cross the Atlantic, especially the south Atlantic, unless we were ready and able to do what Britain is doing now," the secretary of state said. "Were the Atlantic to fall into German control the Atlantic would offer little or no assurance of security."

The secretary urged the importance of giving maximum material assistance to Britain and the other countries fighting the Axis powers.

PENNYS TURNPIKE
WILL BE EXTENDED

COLUMBUS, Jan. 15.—State Highway Director Hal G. Sours said today he had recommended an indefinite point between Youngstown and the vicinity of East Liverpool as a possible Ohio entry for the proposed extension of Pennsylvania's recently-opened $70,000,000 turnpike.

Sours said William Staats of Harrisburg, engineer for the Pennsylvania Turnpike commission, informed him in a conference yesterday that legislation is being prepared in Pennsylvania to provide for both westward and eastward extension of the 164-mile toll road. Its present western terminal is near Pittsburg.

The Ohio highway chief recently said that while there were no prospects for immediate Ohio action, the cost to extend the highway across the state would be approximately $80,000,000.

DUAL DECISION

Wendell L. Willkie's decision to live up to his promise that he would provide leadership for the opposition apparently has been timed to assist the lend-lease bill, which was an odds-on favorite to pass congress anyway. Nevertheless, Mr. Willkie's gesture of leadership, a continuation of his refusal in the campaign to make partisan capital of honest differences of opinion over foreign policy, will help to focus popular attention on a decision that must be made without delay.

Actually, it is not one decision, but two decisions. First, the United States must decide whether or not it believes Great Britain should be helped to win the war by being permitted to draw on American resources with the cost to be taken care of in the form of IOU's. With the exception of isolationists and half-splitters, the national decision on this point already has been reached. It is "Yes—and the sooner the better."

The other decision, then, is whether the President of the United States, in order to match the quick and shifty strategy of the nations that have committed themselves to the destruction of all governments that fuction in the name of democracy, should be granted unusual powers for the purpose of administering aid to Britain. Specifically, should President Roosevelt be given a blank check and the power of decision in the lend-lease bill?

Mr. Willkie, explaining that unusual powers are needed for an unusual situation, answers in the affirmative; his belief in aid to Britain was declared early in his unsuccessful campaign for the presidency. Some Republicans, of course, won't agree with him, and neither will some Democrats, because this isn't a partisan issue. But those Republicans who do agree—and they seem to be a majority—are pleased to think that their opinion has been expressed officially. It is a tremendous responsibility for any man to take, trying to speak for a party, but it's worth trying.

TESTIMONY BY A GOVERNOR

One passage in Gov. Bricker's inaugural address departs abruptly from the rule of generalities applied to speeches of this nature. "Of the thousands of people who have come to my office," complained the governor, "not more than a dozen have ever appealed to me to save money. The others generally have been wanting something from government that requires an appropriation—just a little here and a little there which in the end runs into millions."

Gov. Bricker then goes on to say that state and local governments now have more reason to save money than they ever had before. The federal government is being called on to raise extra billions for national defense, a responsibility it cannot share with the states and communities. Taxpayers everywhere will be asked to make additional sacrifices. Unless money can be saved wherever possible, the cost of defense will be a net addition to the public burden of supporting government.

Yet, Gov. Bricker and all other administrative officials must be painfully aware that saving money is not what the people want them to do. The people want government to spend and spend and spend and never to collect. The people, left to their own devices, would commit financial suicide. They are saved from a fate they ardently seek only by the sense of stewardship that resides in a few earnest public officials who don't laugh when they say, "Economy."

That is why most Ohioans are genuinely glad that John W. Bricker is going to be governor of this state for the next two years.

THE INITIATIVE

If the usual pattern of Teutonic efficiency is being observed, the printing presses in Germany even now are whirling through the documents proving Great Britain was planning to invade Ireland so the Nazis had to invade it first in self-protection. It's an odd thing, but Germans seem to view rationalization as a prime necessity.

In this war, as in the World war, Germany claimed it struck at neutral countries—Belgium last time, Belgium and the Netherlands this time—to beat Great Britain to the punch. Denmark and Norway were invaded, Germany claimed, because it had positive evidence that Great Britain was preparing to use them as a base of operation. By the time the British had squared away to declare war over Poland, German troops were marching and German planes were winging their way to their objectives. In Czechoslovakia and in Austria, Germany moved first, talked afterward. But in each case it was prepared with plenty of excuses and explanations.

Whether Irish patriots like it or not, the chances are their beloved country is going to be invaded; it is strategically situated for the purposes of both contestants. It is not, therefore, an observation about relations between Great Britain and Eire, but an observation about "gittin' thar fustest with the mostest men" when Americans hope the initiative won't be surrendered easily to the combatant who has monopolized it so far in this war.

SPITWORK TAKES ITS REVENGE

In calmer days, the sniffing and snooping of the special senate committee to investigate last fall's campaign spending would be a nine-day sensation. The committee has discovered that man is vile.

The Hatch act, originally passed to cramp the style of Democrats willing to make the most of the election possibilities of WPA, was amended to cramp the style of Republicans, who always had been willing to accept checks from wealthy philanthropists. Unless the public understands that the Hatch act was and is political spitwork—whatever good intentions may be behind it—there is no way of understanding what has happened.

Briefly, it is this. Neither party ever intended to let the act interfere with winning the election. Some things, of course, had become too dangerous to try. Some took care of themselves, like the New Deal allegiance of the WPA vote. As for the $3,000,000 overall limit and the $5,000 personal limit, well they were things that had to be managed.

The senate committee now is finding out how they were managed. It seems to be learning that both parties were guilty. Perhaps it will be forced to conclude that there isn't much difference between politicians. It may even be forced to point out that federal laws like the Hatch act, passed for spitwork, are bound to have a rough time of it under fire.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, January 16

A PARTICULARLY progressive and propitious day may be read from the ruling figures. There may be much stirring of social, affectional and artistic nature, with functions in such directions felicitous and profitable. But there may be dangers from self-indulgence, impetuosity and strife, with extravagance and uncumbersome outlay of funds. There may be some clash with superiors or those in power. Work may be lucrative.

Those whose birthday it is should have a successful and happy year, with everything prospering and gratifying and ambitions both in work and home. There may be unusual social engagements or sentimental activities, with the artistic aspect of such functions exceptional. A danger to this happiness and progress lurks in impetuosity, indulgence, extravagance or in a conflict with a superior or authority. A child born on this day should be practical, ambitious, and extraordinarily gifted in high creative ability in music, poetry and art.

Headlines say: "Millions of New Defense Jobs Predicted." That's enough to take care of the 200,000 people who should be dropped from the Federal pay roll.

It is assumed that even though the legislature got away to a flying start, the committee on turning the clocks back took time to look ahead.

CONCERNING DIET AFTER 60

Teeth An Important Factor In Digestive Troubles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Digestive troubles are common in aged people. In tabulating the complaints of 300 patients over sixty years of age Barker found digestive symptoms second highest in frequency. Few of them, however, were due to real organic disease of the stomach or other digestive organs, most being secondary to some manifestation of the aging process, such as arthritis or arterial change.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The secretions of the digestive tract in those from sixty to eighty, like all other parts of the body, atrophy. There is less saliva, and less pancreatic secretion, so that the digestion of starches is incomplete at this age period, a valuable thing to remember because old people eat a good deal of starchy food because it is easier to chew.

Dietary restrictions which are sometimes self-imposed, sometimes imposed by an over-zealous physician or over-protective family, are, however, not warranted in elderly people. The children of oldsters too often think their parents are not eating enough or are eating too much. Perhaps this is a subconscious revenge for dietary restriction imposed on them when they were children!

Good Teeth Important

Good teeth are as at all age periods, essential in good digestion. But the matter should not receive special attention after sixty. Good fitting, comfortable, efficient dentures are essential and not easy to get. A physician friend of ours lost thirty pounds in nearly as many days and found it was all due to a poor denture that decreased his appetite.

The tongue is another important factor in digestion and nutrition after sixty. At this age, sore tongue is very common, and appetite and desire for food naturally suffer, to say nothing of the fact that mastication is inefficient. A sore tongue may be the sign of anemia or vitamin deficiency.

Most of the stomach diseases are rare after sixty but gall-bladder disturbance may be common, and, as always, causes as one symptom, indigestion. Gallstones may occur without pain. Pain, indeed, is much reduced in the aged. We recently saw a case where an old gentleman had appendicitis with a large abscess without any pain or even fever.

Constipation is the bane of an elderly person's life. It is as natural for an old person to take cathartics as for a young person to fall in love. The natural loss of muscular tonus of the intestines is one factor, the soft, non-roughage food they choose on account of no teeth or bad dentures, is another. Impaction is a common condition at this age period. Sig-mold diverticulitis has been called the left-sided appendicitis of the aged. Sudden changes of diet are not well borne by the elderly. And drugs act in an unexpected and sometimes alarming fashion. On the other hand, contrary to all expectation, old people stand surgical operations well.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
S. M. D.: "Is taking a lemon in warm water every morning before breakfast an aid to reducing? Please tell me also if epsom salts taken regularly is harmful."

Answer—Nothing that anybody takes to eat is reducing. A lemon has caloric value just the same as an orange, although, it is true, not quite so much. The only possible way in which a lemon taken in this way could help to reduce would be that it diminished the appetite for more concentrated foods at breakfast. Taking epsom salts is decidedly harmful. It is an irritant and creates a habit.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

The conference of the Osborne Case investigators continued with this discussion of suspects:

"If it's a ruthless type we're looking for, let's consider Ann. There's a cold-blooded young woman, if you like. Not a nerve in her body. Reading Shakespeare when three murder was committed, if you swallow her story—I can't!"

"What about young Fleming? Oh, I know he isn't the most likely suspect, but he's got to be considered. The silk scarf was in his hands at three o'clock. He may be lying about what he did with it. He's very much in love with the oldest girl and young men in love don't stop to think. He was in the garden alone half-an-hour before the murder was discovered. He could have entered through the windows and killed the old woman. Motive? Well, hearing from Dorothy that the old woman was disinheriting her father—knowing that his parents would object to their only son marrying a penniless girl—"

"If we're considering Fleming, let's not forget the younger children. Doctor Denham says that no particular strength was exerted in the commission of the crime. A child could have done it. I'm told young Peter recently made a murderous attack on another boy at school—"

"It's my opinion that we ought to concentrate our attention on Simon Osborne. He's the likeliest of the lot. A drunken old bachelor, with no moral code and not the ghost of a conscience, he stood to gain considerably by the old woman's death and he'd think no more of it than of blowing foam off a glass of beer. He sponged shamelessly on his cousin when Stephen was poor; he could look forward to endless easy pickings if the timely death of Octavia made Stephen rich. His alibi for the time of the murder is weak. I wouldn't mind betting that Simon is our man!"

The ashtrays were overflowing with spent matches, ash and cigarette and cigar stubs. The atmosphere was hazy with smoke. Down both sides of a long table in the sheriff's office five men were seated in the informal postures of those who have been sitting in talk on hard seats until the sabbath portions of their anatomies are tired and sore. They were weary of the discussion, which had gone on for hours. " . . . about it and about, but everyone came out at the same door wherein I went. . . . The quart, were Inspector Burrows, Sergeant Feathers, an assistant district attorney, Dr. Heffner, the coroner, and the sheriff who was stifling a yawn."

Sheriff Falk Rose.

"Gentlemen," he said, "we're getting nowhere fast. This is the twentieth of our conferences on the Osborne Case and we are simply going over the old ground. None of us has a fresh idea. There isn't an avenue of speculation that hasn't been explored time and again. The fact that we can make out a reasonable case against any individual member of the family is nullified by the fact that we can make out as good a case against every member of the family. We can't put 'em all on trial, nor can we settle it by drawing a name out of a hat.

"Gentlemen, this is the last conference on the Osborne Case that we shall hold. Unless further evidence comes to light, the case goes into the 'Unsolved' file."

In this decision the sheriff and district attorney's office were following rather belatedly on the heels of the press. For lack of fresh material, the newspapers had dropped the case a number of weeks before. The public was tired of it. People were beginning to forget who the Osbornes were. In the village of Lakelawn they still remembered and gossiped at the Osbornes every time they went out; but villages have long memories for their own scandals. To the world at large, the Osbornes were becoming just another family.

Edith Osborne was humming to herself as she came downstairs early one morning in November. She felt more cheerful than she had done since the fateful day in August when Octavia was murdered. Life was becoming bearable again now that they were no longer living in the full glare of publicity. Now that they were no longer stared at and pointed out wherever they went, the children were beginning to forget, to laugh and be happy, to take up the normal pursuits of healthy young people.

Michael, Peter and Marjory were at new schools and finding that they were no longer regarded as freaks for having had an aunt who was murdered. Ann was trying to write a novel, appearing at meals with her spectacles askew and ink all over her fingers. Dorothy and Ted Fleming were friends again.

Oh, life was good! Not as sweet as before—Edith knew that the old feeling of peace and security in the bosom of her family was gone, never to return—but good, nevertheless. The only fly in the ointment was Stephen. Poor Stephen!

Stephen did not forget. He hardly ever went out. Edith could not remember when she had last seen him smile. His hair was whitening, he was growing old before her eyes. Something must be done about it. Edith went out on the front steps and brought in the morning newspaper. She glanced at the front page. Suddenly she put a hand to her head and uttered a bitter cry. "Not again! Oh, they can't start it all over again—"

She was staring at an advertisement which occupied almost half the page:

THE FAMILY THAT CANNOT FORGET!
Once Happy, Now Plunged In Gloom By Haunting Memory Of Murdered Aunt

In the Sunday World next week will be told for the first time the inside story of the Osbornes, the tragic family which figures in the most engrossing unsolved mystery of recent years. An absorbing human narrative of normal, everyday family life, shattered forever by a cruel and sudden death which brought the father a fortune but destroyed the happiness of his loved ones. This story, told by an intimate friend and illustrated by exclusive pictures, will touch the hearts of all who read it.

Exclusive in the SUNDAY WORLD

"They can't! They can't do it! That's over! They can't start it all again."

Hannah came into the hall and stared at her employer's white, strained face. "What is it, Ma'am? Is anything wrong?"

"Don't ask me any questions, Hannah. I've got to go to New York at once. I'll be back tonight. I know I can rely on you to see to things while I'm gone."

"Of course, Ma'am."

During the journey from Lakelawn to New York, Edith's mind kept saying: They can't do it. They can't start it all over again. Why won't they let people forget us? There can't be any news in a story that's been told so often. They've squeezed it dry.

The Sunday World building was a tall white structure facing the Hudson river. In the entrance hall a private policeman greeted Mrs. Osborne and she asked to see the editor. "Fill in this form, lady, and I'll send it up."

Edith wrote her name on the form but left blank the space provided for an explanation of the nature of her business. The officer summoned a boy, who took the slip of paper upstairs. It seemed hours before the boy came back. Looking at the clock, Edith was startled to discover that only five minutes had elapsed. The boy said something to the officer and handed him the form Edith had filled in. The man approached her, twisting the paper in his thick fingers.

"Sorry, lady, but the editor is engaged."

Edith took the paper from him and wrote: from Lakelawn under her name. "Will you be kind enough to send it up again?" she asked.

The officer glanced at what she had written and his eyebrows rose. "Certainly, lady," he said. "Boy!"

Before long the messenger was back. This time he walked up to Edith, clicked his heels, and said: "Mr. Smith will see you, lady. Please follow me."

Mr. Smith was a dapper little man of about thirty-five. He had sleek hair, sharp features and piercing eyes. When Edith entered, he bobbed up to shake hands with her and bobbed down again in all one motion.

"Good day, Mrs. Osborne. Won't you sit down? Now, what can I do for you?"

Edith took the advertisement from her handbag and passed it across the desk to him.

"I came about this," Mr. Smith raised his eyebrows. "Yes?"

"You should not print that story."

"No? But I'm afraid we must. We've advertised it all over. Our readers will be looking for it."

"If you print it," said Edith unsteadily, "I shall sue for libel."

"I don't think you will, Mrs. Osborne. We are very careful, you know. Our attorneys have been over every word, and they assure us that the story is free from libel. Would you care to see it? I have a proof here."

From a drawer he took a sheet of paper the size of a newspaper page and placed it before Edith, who looked at it with eyes that grew more and more haggard. It was worse, far worse, than she had feared. It was actually illustrated by pictures of her children from babyhood to their present ages; pictures she had loved and cherished, which no one but close family friends had ever possessed. They must have been obtained from someone to whom she had personally given them in the glowing pride of motherhood.

The text was an intimate study of her family life and touched on things no one but a close friend—or one who had been a close friend—could have known. . . . Suddenly she knew who must have written it. Simon Osborne! The Uncle Simon her children adored. . . . (To be continued.)

DEFENSE EXPENSE TAKES BIG CHUNK

Will Be About 37 Per Cent Of All Expenditures Says Cleveland Trust

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15.—Cleveland Trust Co. estimated today national defense costs this fiscal year "will consume about 37 per cent of all federal expenditures."

This, the bank continued in its monthly business review, is "a great increase" over the low mark of 11 per cent in 1934, but "far below the 'average' percentage of almost 60 for 1919."

Charting figures for the past 30 years, Cleveland Trust said "reasons for these strange anomalies are not to be found in meager expenditures for defense, but rather in the great expansions of the non-military and non-naval costs of federal government activities."

Viewing other aspects of the business scene, the bank observed: "If stock prices had now the relationship to industrial production as in 1935-1937 they would be on the average almost twice as high as at present; thus they 'no longer forecast business expansion, but in the long run are likely to be dragged upwards by it;'"

"No shortage of steel is impending" and no shortage should develop "if reasonable precautions are taken to avoid the use of large quantities in connection with non-essential civilian projects."

Facilities for making steel ingots have increased 13 per cent since 1929 against a population increase of but eight per cent, and 1941 production at rated capacity would produce one-third more steel than in 1929 with less than one-fifth of it needed for U. S. and British defense orders.

It is "disquieting" that in metal working industries, a census shows the percentage of machines over ten years old and no longer considered "competitively efficient" is 81 in army arsenals, 82 in railroad shops and 62 in automotive industries, with aircrafts making the best showing "as might be expected" with "only 28 per cent of the machines over age."

A brilliant performance by Bette Davis is no novelty now after her many prize winning characterizations, but her latest in "The Letter" at the State tonight and Thursday, is being hailed by the critics and fans as her best.

"A baddie" again, Miss Davis dominated the entire story as the wife of a Singapore planter who is on trial for having killed a man in self-defense. The trial proceeds along lines which indicate the jury's belief in her story until a letter is introduced in the case, bringing doubt and suspicion.

James Stephenson as the defending lawyer and Herbert Marshall as the loyal husband do excellent work. Gale Sondergaard, Frieda Inescourt, Bruce Lester, Elizabeth Earl and Cecil Kellaway are in the supporting cast.

The Grand double bill tonight only is: "A Night at Earl Carroll's" with Ken Murray, Lillian Cornell, J. Carroll Nash, Rose Hobart, Brenda and Cobina, and Betty McLaughlin; and Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "Lucky Devils", a story of the adventurous life of the newsteel cameramen.

Feeding Children Topic Discussed By Mothers' Club

Two interesting papers featured the Progressive Mothers' circle program at the home of Mrs. J. P. Hochadel, E. Eighth st., Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Charles Kennedy's was "This Way to Good Eating Habits" and Mrs. Myron Kelly's "New and Attractive Dishes for Children."

The writers advised parents to see that the child has few distractions at the table; no reproaches for upset food; that he be left alone to eat his meal without great concern on the parent's part, so that the meal might become routine instead of an incident; that he have no in-between meal feedings and that his meals be regular and well balanced.

Mrs. Kelly distributed suggested menus for children to the members. The social hour was followed by refreshments served by the hostess.

The Jan. 28 meeting, at which Dr. S. M. Moore, chiropodist, will be speaker, has been changed from the home of Mrs. Ernest Horton to the home of Mrs. Lester Lehman, N. Union ave.

Secretary of State Pleads For Passage of President's Bill

that "the rottenest thing said in public life in my generation" was being used as an argument against the aid-to-Britain program brought an opposition rejoinder today that the President had made the danger of war the foremost issue in the lease-lend armaments bill.
Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), who readily assumed responsibility for the statement which aroused Mr. Roosevelt, said with seeming elation that the President's criticism had raised a "clean cut" question: "Whether or not this bill would lead us into war."
Whether took this position as the house foreign affairs committee opened its public hearings on the lease-lend legislation, calling Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of War Stimson as the first three witnesses.

The actual start of legislative work on the momentous measure took on heightened interest because of Mr. Roosevelt's unexpected blunt-spoken denunciation of the tactics he laid to some opponents of the bill.

SEEMED TO BE NO END OF SUFFERING 'TIL LOCAL WOMAN GAVE TON JON 1 AND 2 THE OPPORTUNITY

Indigestion and Neuralgia Caused Sharp Pain In Chest and Arms. Nervous and Frequent Action Broke Up Rest In Night. No Longer Has To Suffer.

"I had begun to think I would have to go through the rest of my life suffering, but that was before I had given TON JON No. 1 and No. 2 the opportunity of helping me," declared Mrs. George True, Methodist church and Daughter's of America lodge member, whose husband is employed by the Wheeling Steel Corp., they reside at 109 North Seventh street, Steubenville, Ohio.

"My appetite was good, but I had to be very careful of what I ate, for after every meal the food would sour, causing indigestion, gas, heart fluttering and burning, there would be risings in my mouth, and it was seldom I didn't feel nauseated a short time after eating. When I would walk a little too fast there would be sharp pains in my arms, then through my chest. I would have to stop walking until the pains left. I'd have a bad taste in my mouth and my tongue was coated all the time. Besides all this trouble my urine would burn when urinating; being so nervous and having to get up at night to relieve my kidneys broke up my rest. I had been badly constipated for 10 years and the poisons that had accumulated in this time had left my body full of pain especially in my back, legs, back of the neck and neuralgia pain in my arms.

"Through reading how TON JON helped so many, I believed it would help me! From the start it relieved the gas on my stomach and within a short time my stomach trouble was all over, the pains in my arms, legs, neck and back have left me, so has the constipation. I am able to rest and sleep every night and do not have that worn-out, rundown feeling. I certainly am happy to recommend TON JON to all, as it is the best medicine I have ever taken. I want everyone suffering as I did to give it a trial."

Prepares Trial List
LISBON, Jan. 15.—James G. All cases which are permitted by counsel to be placed on the assignment must be disposed of by jury trial, settlement or dismissal.
Copies of the active trial list are mailed to all attorneys in this county and to interested counsel in adjoining counties, in order that they may prepare their case and have it ready to present when assigned.

LISBON, Jan. 15.—Judge Joel H. Sharp today continued the case of Walter Malone and Bertha Abel of East Liverpool, until the next term of court, at the request of counsel for the defense.

The trial of the couple on charges of arson in connection with the firing of property and burning of household goods owned by the defendants, was originally assigned for trial this week, but, due to the inability of Atty. Samuel Chertoff, counsel for the defense, to be present, the case was continued.

Father, Son Face Charge

Trees stated in an affidavit that Stirl Talley and his son, Demaree, 29, forced him to accompany them to Batavia and procure the release from jail of another son, Woodrow Talley, charged with operating a motor vehicle without a driver's license.

Fire Loss Slight
LISBON, Jan. 15.—Lisbon firemen extinguished a blaze at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the S. D. Nold garage. The fire, caused by spontaneous combustion, did little damage.

The most accommodating man you'll ever meet . . .

—but wouldn't you rather start without him?
YES, you can always call an accommodating garage man to come out and start your car's motor every time a cold snap makes it "play dead." You may have to wait awhile for him to come, because naturally he's awfully busy when a cold wave strikes. But he'll get there all right. And even his bill won't break you. BUT WOULDN'T IT BE A LOT NICER TO START EVERY TIME? Wouldn't it be reassuring to know that Standard Oil guarantees you'll start . . . and that if ever you don't, they'll pay the garage service man to start you?
It isn't as though Guaranteed Starting cost you anything extra. You get your written guarantee free with the regular winter precautions you should take anyway . . . So why not enjoy this valuable protection during the blizzard weather still to come?

National Sanitary Drops Eagles, 44 To 18, In Class A Tilt.

DEMINGS DEFEAT CHRISTIANS IN CLASS B BATTLE

Pumpmakers Win 34-18; News Upset by Methodists In Overtime

The National Sanitary kept in the thick of the Class A cage race last night, trouncing the Eagles, 44 to 18, on the Memorial building hardwood.

Culler and E. Jeffries shared scoring honors for the winners, the former collecting 12 points and the latter 11. Raynes led the Eagles' point-making with seven tallies. R. Demings protected his high standing in the Class B circuit, breezing to a 34 to 18 victory over the Christians.

Courtney was the big gun for Demings, chalking up 14 markers. The Christian tallies were well divided.

The Methodists upset the Salem News in an overtime battle, 24 to 19. As the regular time ended, the score stood 19-19, but the Methodists turned on the heat in the overtime period to gain the verdict.

Prison greatly aided the victors, with his 12 points, while Wise and Moffett led the losers with seven and six markers, respectively.

BOWLING RESULTS

The lead in the Owl loop changed hands last night at Grate's as the Crescent Juniors jumped into first place by trimming the Amateur Trades three straight while Scott's Smoke Balls dropped two out of three to the Amateur Pros.

The Jaycee Wildcats trounced the Trades Class in all three frames. The Gem Shoes out the Salem News first place lead to four games in the National League last night as they swept three from the National Sanitary while the Newsmen were losing one out of three to Grate's Recreation at the Masonic alleys. Paulines 220 gave the News a 929 in the third frame for their highest total but Grate topped it with a 935.

The Eagles took two from the Masons, and Boer's Sohioans were awarded three wins on a forfeit from the Moose.

In two Grate Ladies' loop postponed matches, Kaufman's edged out the Trades Class two out of three, and the A. A. A. won two from the Eagles.

NORTHERN, TOLEDO HEAD CAGE PARADE OF BUCKEYE TEAMS

Polar Bears Trip Wittenberg, 54-38; Toledo Trounces Cincy

Ohio Northern and Toledo universally dominated the Ohio college basketball scene today—Northern boasting five straight Ohio conference victories and independent Toledo 10 wins for the season without a loss.

Northern's Polar Bears traveled to Springfield last night, where they defeated Wittenberg, 54 to 48, in a conference game that was tied four times in the last half.

With the score knotted at 44-44 with five minutes to go, the Bears tightened up their defense and collected the baskets that were to give them victory.

Toledo played host to Cincinnati and rang up a lopsided 56-38 triumph over the Queen City hoopers. Capt. Marshall Carlson put the Rockets ahead with a field goal before the game was three minutes old—and there they stayed until the final whistle.

Little Ashland college kept near the top of the Ohio conference scramble with a 46-32 win over Heidelberg at Tiffin.

Muskingum swung back into the conference win column in a thrilling 55-51 game with Bowling Green at New Concord.

Muskingum's Forward Everett sank the baskets in the closing minutes that gave the Muskies the ball game.

Akron lost its first conference game to Kent State, 33 to 29, in a game at Akron which was decided by two last minute field goals by Guard Bill Bollantz.

Tonight's schedule: Miami at Ohio Wesleyan, Wooster at Otterbein, Denison at Mount Union, John Carroll at Niagara, Bluffton at Findlay and Giffin at Defiance.

OHIOANS OPPOSE ROOSEVELT BILL

Would Put U. S. In Position of Aiding Dictators. Is Charge

that the measure would give the President power to give away anything to any other country without restriction by law.

Jenkins said that under the legislation, the President "will have the power to fix any price he pleases and to accept any kind of property or trinkets he pleases in exchange."

"The President may at any time authorize the secretaries of war and navy to purchase all war materials they please from any countries that the President designates—no limitation set as to price, quantity or quality."

How Jenkins Views Bill

"And the bill authorizes such appropriations—no limit fixed—as may be necessary to carry out the President's wishes."

The President could, Jenkins said, authorize the heads of the war, navy or other departments to: "Manufacture in any American arsenal for any country the President believes should be aided, any arms, munitions, aircraft or battleships, and to procure without limitation any such articles for any such countries."

"Sell, lease or give away any such articles to any such countries. 'Test, repair and completely recondition any such articles for any such countries.'"

"Give away to any such government most, if not all, of our military and naval secrets. 'Set aside any of our laws controlling exports of any such articles to such countries.'"
